Down Goes No.2

Seven years of frustration ended last Wednesday night when the UMass Lowell Chiefs beat the Boston University Terriers at Tully Forum. Entering the game the Chiefs had not beaten BU since Nov. 22, 1986. In fact the Chiefs had only beaten the Terriers once in the school's history. These last time the two teams met, the Terriers handed the Chiefs one of their worst losses of the year a 9-1 drubbing at Walter Bown Arena in Boston.

This time the Chiefs planned to turn things around. Riding an eight game unbeaten streak the Chiefs hadn't lost since the last BU game. The were pumped up for their rematch with the No. 2 team in the Nation.

If the Chiefs can keep the momentum going into Walter Brown Arena on Friday the could put themselves into a tie with BU for first in Hockey East. There is more to these games then just Hockey East standings. The Chiefs must win the games against the big teams if the want to make the NCAA tournament which many people felt the should have been last year.

The UMass Lowell assault began early as the Chiefs carried the play throughout the first ten minutes of the game pelting BU goalie J.P. McKersie with a barrage of shots. Finally, with UMass Lowell on the power play the Chiefs broke through.

Take a Trip on the Internet Courtesy of UMass Lowell

Edmund Tsai
Staff Writer

There is an enormous untapped resource available at the university which can be used by all students at no extra cost, and should be taken advantage of at least once during your stay here. Consider talking with a friend who is in California without having to pay a small fortune to a long distance carrier of your choice, or discussing a topic with thousands of people around the world, or even getting source material for a term paper from a distant library in Europe. Look no further, because all this and more is possible, courtesy of our Academic Computing Center and the United States government. Perhaps you have heard of this phenomenon called Internet. It has been receiving publicity in the news lately due to president Clinton pushing the information highway which would allow sharing of information by millions of people around the world.

Internet can be accessed through our campus computer systems very easily, but there are some simple steps to be taken before this is available for your use. The first step in getting yourself connected is to walk, not run (you might slip on the ice), down to Academic Computing located on the first floor of the Olsen building in room 111. Don't forget to bring proof that you are a student at UMass Lowell. Once you are there, sign up for a VAX account or a UNIX account or even both. If you don't know what these are, you can pick up some manuals on the way out, or even ask the friendly people there on how to use the computing resources. Your Internet account can be accessed from various computer terminals on both North and South campuses (get a list!).

Now that you have yourself a brand spanking new computer account, there are many services available to you. One of the more powerful resources of your account is the access it gives you to newsgroups. Newsgroups are various forums where discussion on various topics take place by anybody who has access to them, who could be people here at the university or people on the other side of the world in Tokyo. The topics which are available to you on these newsgroups range from baseball, to music, to politics, all the way to discussions on the latest technologies. Some valuable uses of the newsgroups to students is the jobs forums, where you can find out about positions openings in various companies, or the forsale forums, where you can get rid of that old stereo and get yourself a better one. Of course many of the newsgroups are oriented towards computers, technology and sciences, but there are many that exist just for entertainment and fun. For those of you that are familiar with services such as Compuserve, GENIE and Prodigy, the utility of Internet is probably more apparent when you realize that not only is it cheaper (practically free to students), but the area it spans is much greater.

Newsgroups are not the only service that Internet provides, there is another facet which might interest you. Have you ever used the post office to send mail to a friend at another university? Try sending them electronic mail next time. They will receive it much sooner (in a matter of minutes) and you can get a reply from them in about the same time. This is assuming that their university computer system is also connected to Internet, although most of the respectable institutions are. With your computer account you can even send mail to the whitehouse, directly to the president or vice president, and even some famous recording artists. Many corporations also provide technical assistance and information through Internet mailing.

Maybe electronic mail is too slow for you, and you want to talk with a friend immediately. Don't pick up the phone, go online and you can "talk" with them. You won't hear their voice, but both of you can type to each other on the screen simultaneously. This type of communication won't run your phone bill through the roof, so you can "talk" as long as you like.

Electronic correspondence is not the only thing possible with Internet. Transferring software is also possible between different computers on the network. This is possible through File Transfer Protocol (FTP), which allows you to connect to distant file servers and obtain scientific, educational, and entertainment software for your IBM PC compatible, Macintosh or virtually any operating system available today. There are millions of these file servers available worldwide.

These are only a few of the services that are available on Internet, but they should give you a good foothold with which you can start learning.

Emory Gets Grant For Virtual Library Project

By College Press Service

ATLANTA - Books, schmooks. We want instant computer access to digitalized information, preferably from dorm rooms and offices.

That's the wave of the future, anyway, and universities are working to transform libraries of yesteryear into libraries of the future to accommodate changing needs.

Emory University recently received a $300,000 grant from the Luce Foundation in New York City that enables the school to start a three-year, $900,000 project to develop a blueprint for a prototype of a virtual library - a library in which books and other bound materials are transferred to digital information available at the touch of a computer button and connection of a telephone line.

Serious discussions have been underway between Emory, Harvard University and Yale University to collaborate on the project so the universities could work together to solve problems inherent in sharing resources electronically and to increase the quantity of material available in electronic form, said Jan Gleason, executive director of Emory's News and Information office.

Issues dealing with copyright law, usage and storage capability are just some of the enormous challenges of such a project, Gleason said. But the rewards of virtual libraries also are huge.

Imagine, for instance, being able to access an entire novel from the comfort of your computer work station in a home or office and using a keyword search to find a certain bit of information.

Access to digital libraries is extremely helpful in research, for instance, an art history student at Emory who needs access to a book at the Harvard library might be able to download the needed information by modem if the book were stored digitally. Without electronic access, the student either would have to either travel to Harvard to do the research or go through the complicated process of getting the book by loan - if it were available that way.

Several factors are driving the trend toward virtual libraries, but one of the biggest is financial considerations. Books have become much more expensive in recent years, the number of publications has increased and the costs of maintaining decaying collections have risen as well.

"It has become increasingly untenable for college and university libraries to meet the information needs of their faculty and students through the traditional avenue of adding to their collections," said Bill Frye, Emory's interim president and provost.

Pat Battin, president of the Commission on Preservation and Access, said compatibility and cooperation were keys to the success of any digital library consortium. "The productive use of digital technology requires first and foremost a collaborative mechanism to create a compatible nationwide infrastructure so that scholarly materials can be economically stored and readily shared on an international basis, including the capability to convert digital materials into such forms as paper or film for those users who do not have access to sophisticated technology," Battin said.

Other universities also are working on virtual library projects. Columbia University's Law Library in New York is currently scanning and digitalizing 10,000 to 20,000 volumes per year in a five-year project. A total of 750,000 volumes exist in its collection. The University of Florida, the University of Southern California, Carnegie Mellon University of Pennsylvania and Rutgers University of New Jersey are some of the other institutions working on projects related to virtual libraries.

Three Cheers for (from) us

And then it happened. It came about gradually, really, but it did indeed come about. With precious seconds remaining in our UML hockey team's sensational and self-fulfilling victory over the first-place Hockey East and number two in the nation Boston University Terriers, the B.U. (I can't believe we're watching a hockey game in Bill-a-rica) faithful got up and left, en masse, to a most gratifying and resounding chorus from the home team's student section, waving, swaying, and singing in glorious unity: Na na na na...Hey hey hey, Goodbye.

The triumph over B.U., only UML's second such win since the Hockey East Conference formed a decade ago, not only marked the fruition of coach Bruce Crowder's hard-working and talented squad, but, almost more heartening, the emergence of a loud and proud student cheering section.

Like student support all season, it came on slowly in this game. But, by the third period, with Lowell hanging on to a two goal lead, every play on the ice was met with boisterous responses from the new UML hockey hard-liners. Every Dwayne Roloson gem of a save was rewarded with hearty chants of Roli-Roli-Roli; every enemy penalty (and subsequent complaint--allow me to indulge in a verbose parenthetical offering: B.U. is not only the top team in the East, but slash-for-slash the dirtiest as well; but hard-skating, and smart, disciplined, tough play will win out over cheap shots and goon tactics every time, and Coach Crowder and his team should be commended for every aspect of their play last Wednesday) \*and now back to the sentence*** was met with a you you you you; every UML near miss (and there were several, particularly in the second period) was met with a heartfelt groan; every golden B.U. opportunity gone awry (including one thwarted by a brilliant steal by defenseman Dave Barozzino late in the third period) was met with a frightened gasp; even the cheerleaders got in on the act, often shouting with, and not just for the students. It was a grand show.

On the ice, Lowell fairly dominated the heavily favored B.U. team which only a month ago blew UML out of the Walter Brown Arena, 9-1. Two goals from senior Shane Henry (a strong Hobey Baker candidate as the nation's top player), and single tallies from sophomore standout Christian Sbrocca (whose balance of skill, toughness, and outright hustle make him a valuable team asset) and defenseman Kerry Angus (an integral part of a much-improved UML blue line crew) provided the means--Roloson, solid special teams play, and the fans provided the end.

This team has peaked, and hopefully will have sustained and increased the momentum of their current (as of Thursday) unbeaten streak (7-0-3 in their last ten games) after a big rematch this past Friday at B.U. and what should have been an easy non-conference win at Yale (I think I just stumbled into a new tense--the future past).

Coach Crowder's team is capable of great things in the coming weeks, and it will be fun to watch. The first line of Henry, senior tri-captain Mike Murray, and freshman phenom Greg "Raging" Bullock, is as fine as any in the country. An NCAA berth is probable, although we all thought that last year, and a performance even as good as last year's (a third place finish) in this year's Hockey East playoffs would be somewhat disappointing.

But let's not get too far ahead of ourselves. For starters, this weekend (February 11 and 12), the UML'sters play two at home against the still dangerous and daunting Maine Black Bears at our hockey home away from home, the Tully Forum in Billerica. I suggest getting tickets this week, over at Costello. They're only a buck, but they promise to provide a lot of bang.

The Forum will be, simply put, the place to be this weekend. Don't miss the action or the fun. There is plenty of room for more enthusiastic hockey rooters in that charming old ice-sore, so be there. The more the merrier, the louder the better, the more raucous the...um, more raucous (that fell apart rather quickly). The place Wednesday was just bursting with school pride--a rare commodity indeed in these frozen days of slick sidewalks and unplowed parking lots (yes, I am going to mention it every week for as long as our campus is a blatant hazard to us--and, while I'm at it, in the future, if the university cannot get the parking lots plowed before they are half full, perhaps school should be cancelled or delayed so that this problem (and it was a problem last Friday) may be remedied; fair enough?) a little school spirit goes a long way.

Anyway, last Wednesday there was a lot of school spirit and I, for one, was so gosh-darned excited, proud, and, well, happy, I didn't want to leave the place, even after our victorious hockey boys saluted the crowd, saluted us, sticks raised high, heads held higher around center ice.

Our hockey team has arrived. And we the students are right there with it.

Nominations for Teaching Awards

Prof. Jesse Heines, Chair
College of Arts and Sciences
Undergraduate Studies
Committee

The College of Arts and Sciences is pleased to announce the establishment of an Arts and Sciences College Teaching Award. The major purposes of this Award are to reward a professor in the College of Arts and Sciences who demonstrates exceptional teaching and to support that part of our University's mission which calls for a reaffirmation of teaching and learning.

The professor receiving this Award will be recognized at the College graduation ceremony in May and have his or her name inscribed on a plaque to be displayed prominently in the Dean's reception area. The professor will also receive a plaque for his or her own office and a monetary award to be used in accordance with the established University guidelines for such awards.

Nominations for this Award will be accepted from all members of the UMass Lowell academic community through February 11, 1994. We strongly encourage students to nominate professors whom they believe demonstrate excellence in teaching but are not necessarily the most popular of professors. However, professors nominated must have been teaching at UMass Lowell (or one of its predecessor institutions) for at least ten years and must not be current members of the College Undergraduate Studies Committee.

Evaluation will be based on demonstrated excellence attested to by written recommendations solicited from faculty peers, current students, and alumni; an examination of a portfolio of teaching materials; and observations of the professor's classroom by members of the College Undergraduate Studies Committee. This will not be a popularity contest!

Nominations must be made on the official Teaching Award Nomination Form available in Dean Shirvani's office on the fifth floor of Olsen Hall. Note that these forms require you to obtain the signatures of five other people who second your nomination. Completed nomination forms are to be returned to Prof. Jesse Heines in the Dept. of Computer Science no later than February 18, 1994.

We look forward to your nominations and honoring the professor you feel best demonstrates excellence in teaching!

Have a say what you read in YOUR paper. Come and write for the Connector News Department. Our meetings are every Monday Night at 6:00pm in Fox Room 426. As always there is pizza and beverages for all afterwards.

Fire(?) in Engineering

Ryan Tucker
Contributing Writer

Last Monday, January 31 at 10:26 A.M., fire alarms screamed out across North Campus. The alarms were started automatically by smoke detectors in the Engineering Building as a thick grayish cloud spread from the basement. The smoke, as one secretary in the James B. Francis College of Engineering office describes, was almost like a fog through the hallways.

The room where the smoke originated from was one floor below the Marilyn Evans Lounge, and to the other side of the elevator. The room was the mechanical room for the Engineering Building, and is used to control the heating, ventilation, and air conditioning (HVAC). The machine that caused the smoke was a motor that powered an air compressor.

The smoke travelled along the hallways to Ball, but for most of the rooms in Ball, only the odor was noticeable. The smoke also spread through the buildings by elevator shaft and spaces around heating pipes.

responded to the alarm and proceeded to locate the source of the smoke. Effective use of fans and fire doors quickly cleared the area of smoke. They left the scene at 11:01 A.M.

According to Rich Lemoine of the Environmental Health and Safety office, and Sgt. Patricia Reardon of the UMass Lowell

Police Dept., no injuries were reported from smoke inhalation.

Woman Attends The Citadel

CHARLESTON, S.C. - Shannon Faulkner, after a long court fight, finally got to register and attend classes at The Citadel, an all-male, state-supported institution.

Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist, in mid-January, denied a request by attorneys for The Citadel to delay a lower court ruling that allowed Faulkner to attend the academy. After 152 years of being an all-male institution, Faulkner became the first female admitted to the academy's day program.

Faulkner, of Powersville, S.C., applied to The Citadel last year and had officials at her high school delete all references to her gender. She had been provisionally accepted, pending final transcripts, and then Citadel officials realized that her transcripts had been tampered.

She was denied acceptance, and sued.

"Our issue is that there is a valid need to single-gender educational opportunities for both males and females," said Citadel spokesman Maj. Rick Mills. "We are fighting for our preservation as a single-gender college."

Robert Black, a Charleston attorney who worked on Faulkner's case, said that The Citadel's arguments were "embarrassing," and that Faulkner's attending The Citadel was no threat to single-sex education.

Panel Probes Academy Cheating

ANNAPOLIS, Md. - Three retired admirals will investigate a cheating scandal at the U.S. Naval Academy that could involve a large number of disciplinary cases against graduating seniors.

A year-long investigation found that some midshipmen had advance access to an electrical engineering test that was administered to 700 students on Dec. 14, 1992.

"We don't know the numbers or how the exam was compromised," said Naval Academy spokeswoman Karen Myers. "We expect there to be a significant number of students. They are all graduating seniors, and we are working on a process to hear all the cases to determine if individuals did commit a violation."

Three retired flag officers are on the review panel, and they will examine files on all the cases and recommend how they should be handled. If violations are not too serious, they can recommend some punishment short of dismissal. In more serious cases students could face criminal charges and expulsion.

The New York Times reported in early January that 125 midshipmen will be implicated, but officials at the Naval Academy couldn't verify that number.

An initial investigation last year listed 28 midshipmen who had access to the exam, and all but six were cleared. However, on May 3 a student brought new information to academy officials indicating the "possibility of more honor code violations in the compromise" an academy news release said.

Hiring Outlook Brightens

MILWAUKEE - Companies are planning to increase their hiring for the first quarter of 1994, according to a survey released by Manpower, the Milwaukee-based temporary help firm.

In a survey of more than 15,000 employers in 470 U.S. cities, 18 percent of the respondents said that they planned to increase employment, while 13 percent said they intend to trim their job rolls. Sixty-six percent of the companies plan to remain at their current levels, the survey found.

Manpower President Mitchell Fromstein said the strongest sectors for hiring were in durable goods manufacturing and finance, insurance and real estate, which are "key industries that often fuel follow-up in other sectors."

Job opportunities in public and private education remain "skimpy," the survey found, and there is no indication of any improvement. Gaining some momentum is hiring in public administration positions.

Jobs tend to be more plentiful in the South and Midwest, and the Northeast and West continue to lag.

'Day Without Art' Held

FORT COLLINS, Colo. - Thousands of art works were covered with pieces of paper as part of a national campaign for AIDS awareness campaign.

Each piece of art was covered Dec. 1 with white butcher paper affixed with the "Day Without Art" symbol - a black box with a superimposed "X."

"It seems so simple, but it's a powerful symbol," said Laura Macagno-Shang, a counselor at University Health Services at Colorado State University. "AIDS is taking so much from us, and art is such a vital part of life that when the art is covered we lose an important part of our lives."

Macagno-Shang compared the art covering with the AIDS quilt. "The quilt represents people; it brought the people to us. The 'Day Without Art' takes the people away," she said.

Campus health professionals and volunteers also provided information about AIDS and AIDS testing in prominent locations.

UC Gets native American Department

DAVIS, Calif. - The University of California-Davis has established a Native American Studies Department, the first of its kind in California and one of only a few at universities nationwide.

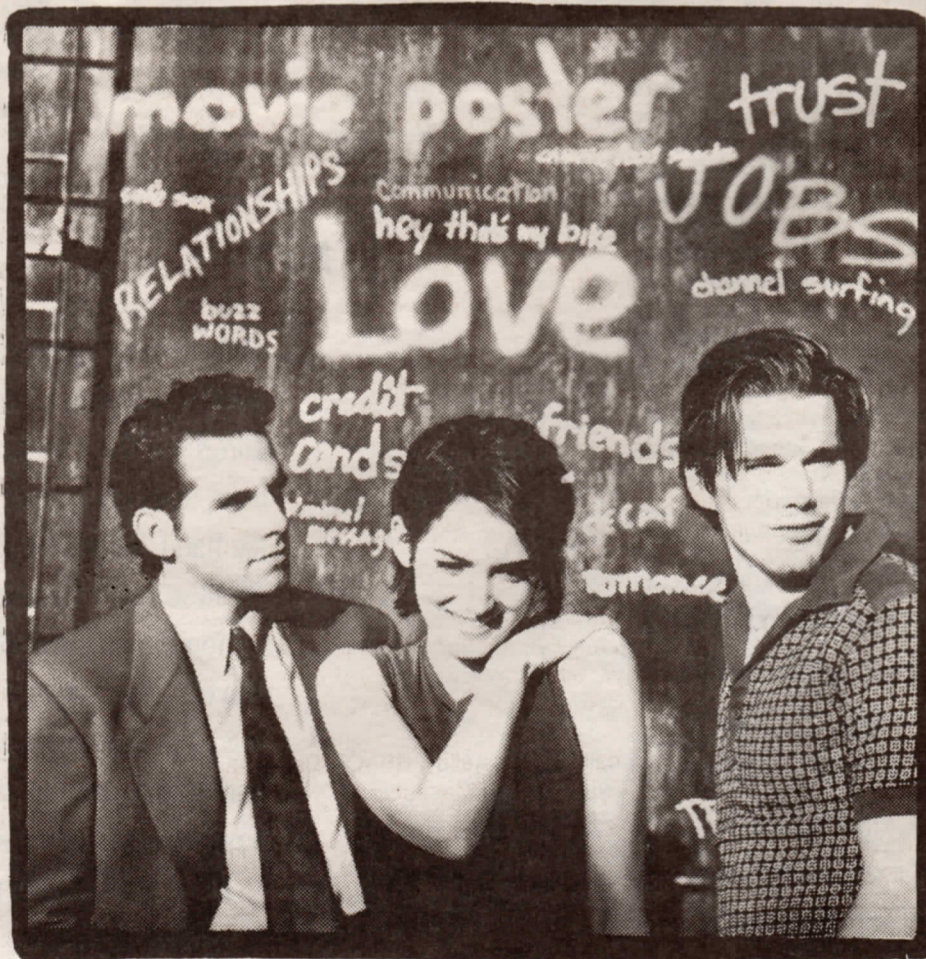

The department was formed from an existing Native American Studies program. UC Davis Provost Larry Vanderhoef cited the academic strength of the 20-year-old program, its international reputation, student interest and geographical location as reasons for expanding the program to a full-fledged department earlier this fall.

Faculty research and teaching interests include the study of Mayan civilization, of native peoples in Central and South America, and native higher education, art and literature.

STRENGHT IN NUMBERS:

Why does it seem like we're always beating our head against the wall? I can tell you, it's exactly what the title says, there's strength in numbers. Student Government should be the strongest and most vocal voice on campus because of their job to represent the student body. In turn, the Commuter Association should be the next largest group. Many of us know that just isn't the way it is. Then, why is it, when you look at the many issues we have to deal with, that we sometimes have such a hard time dealing with the administration? The Administration has gained power just by the virtue of the lack of students willing to participate and support the many issues that concern them. The last group I remember doing that was the ROTC. Everyone remembers that debate. Student Government is supposed to be there for the students. I was under the impression that the views voiced by us was meant to be at least acknowledged by the Administration. We have come a ways in working with the University and the City; however, we still have quite a ways to go, even though things may be improving.

So many issues, so little time, too few people. Should we just look at the issue of apathy. I think not. It seems to have been beaten to death, bur nicely put by Nathan Butze for those who remember his article. Where shall we start? How about my favorite, the bookstore. Last semester, I stated in an SGA meeting that the bookstore was going downtown. My fellow officers and senators were appalled. One member felt the need to run right down to Chancellor Hogan's office to ask if this far fetched statement could hold even a glimmer of truth. No way! Next I know, there it is in black and white, Terri Stack starts some awful rumor. Guess what, Chancellor Hogan attended our next SGA meeting and says, wouldn't it be nice if the bookstore went downtown. Granted relations need to be fixed with the City, but I think the Administration's first responsibility should be to the students.

Then there is the never ending parking issue. I personally have been working on this one for two years. It started with the parking rally I had on South last fall and was continued through the spirit of SGA when they blocked the lot on North. Changes are slow and money is tight. Never forget that. Now we have Marginal Street and people wouldn't believe how much that is costing. Soon to come may be Vulkor. Will that solve the parking problem? I don't think so, but we'll see. Parking is an issue that everyone can help with. Just a reminder, follow the rules or you WILL BE TOWED! Fair maybe not, but unless you can lend a hand in helping resolve the issue, don't complain. It's that apathy thing again.

Moving on, there's the arena. I'm sure most of you have heard the issues on this one. If not and you're interested, feel free to come to our next meeting on this topic, it will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Fox 401 on February 7th.

Here's a good one, and the last of the many issues that I'll discuss at this time, our UMass-Lowell Campus Police. What is the deal? We were going hot and heavy on the issue of arming them on and off campus. To my understanding, Chancellor Hogan agreed to this despite reservations he had. What seems to be the hold up? (No pun intended) We have many academy trained officers that deserve to be armed and provided the necessary equipment (vests were received) for their safety, the safety of the students, and to be able to do their job when they go off campus and assist there Lowell Police. I strongly suggest this issue be resolved before Spring Carnival, because students may need assistance.

You don't have to join SGA to be involved, but anyone who is interested or is directly affected by any off these issues, I encourage you to assist when you can. Chancellor Hogan is also holding open meetings for students to voice their opinions on different issues. Let's put the students back in control. But the most power comes when there is strenght in numbers.

Commuter Association President

Information about Life on Campus

Page 7 February 7, 1994

RHA Spotlight

This week our spotlight focuses on Ginelle Hirtle, the president of the Residential Hall Association. Last year she was the president of the Concordia Hall Council, and still lives there. She was a nursing major, but has recently switched to business with a concentration in finance.

She ran for RHA president because "... I wanted to do more. ... I thought RHA needed people to keep following through on ideas, to make a difference. I think I've managed to bring the group [RHA] closer together, to have a feeling a community and friendship. Now we can count more on each other."

Her advice to people living in the hall is "If you live on campus, this is your home. For those ten months, if you want things to go as you choose it to, the best thing you can do is be involved"

Ginelle wanted to thank both the other members of RHA and George Athanas, their advisor for all their hard work. RHA meets every Tuesday night in Fox 401 at 7pm. They are currently working on the Valentines dance as well as selling daffodils for the cancer society and Plans for Spring Carnival.

GRADUATING IN MAY?

WHAT EMPLOYERS THINK IS WRONG WITH COLLEGE GRADS OF THE 90'S

This is what employers see as the biggest weaknesses, shortcoming or deficiency of today's college graduates:

1. UNREALISTIC EXPECTATIONS - Unrealistic about career advancement opportunities and promotion timeliness, entry-level job opportunities, responsibilities, and starting salaries.
2. ORAL COMMUNICATION SKILLS - Inability to express themselves effectively. Communication skills inappropriate for business environments.
3. WRITING SKILLS - Lack of clear, concise, business writing skills, "especially engineers". Poor spelling, grammar. Inarticulate, incoherent.
4. KNOWLEDGE/UNDERSTANDING OF THE WORK WORLD - Poor research and no knowledge of industry, field, company, competitors, job market or positions. "Clueless" about life beyond the campus. Not well-rounded — academically, culturally, or socially.

5. CRITICAL TRANSFERABLE SKILLS - Deficient in technical skills. Poor math, analytical, problem solving, leadership, creativity, time management, reading and foreign language abilities.

6. PRACTICAL WORK EXPERIENCE - No relevant or "real life" experience. This includes internships, co-ops, part-time, and meaningful voluntary work experience.

7. INAPPROPRIATE ATTITUDES - Lack of patience, desire for immediate "paybacks". Exaggerated sense of entitlement. Unwilling to accept responsibility for their actions. Dissatisfied with lateral broadening vs. career-ladder progression.

8. PERSONAL QUALITIES -

Inflexibility. Lack of loyalty, commitment, ethics, maturity, or confidence. Poor professionalism and ignorance of business or social protocol.

9. CAREER DIRECTION AND GOALS - Failure to assure personal values, abilities, and interests. Have not set goals and often choose jobs which don't suit them.

10. INTERPERSONAL/TEAMWORK SKILLS - Absence of interpersonal skills appropriate for a business setting. Self-centered, with little or no capacity to work and contribute as members of a team.

11. INITIATIVE/WORK ETHIC - No "go get it" attitude. Many wait for jobs to come to them. Unwilling to work long hard hours and to do "whatever it takes".

12. INTERVIEWING SKILLS - Lack strong presentation skills, enthusiasm, energy during the interview process.

Ask Doctor Dorm

Ask Doctor Dorm is the ResLife Line's weekly advice column. Although not unlike the popular column "Dear Abbey...", ask Doctor Dorm is focused on the residents in the halls on campus and other students who may be interested in living in the halls. Questions can be given either to your RA or just drop off at the Office of Residence Life in Cumnock Hall.

Dear Doc Dorm,

I have noticed that certain people correct me whenever I say "dorm". They tell me that the correct phrase is "Residence Hall". Is this being politically correct or is there something else I'm missing.

Confused

Well confused,

These people may take a different view of the place they live in than you do, and they want to make sure you know it. Dorm, which is short for dormitory, comes from the Latin word dorme, meaning "to sleep". Since most residents do much more than sleep in the halls, they prefer are more correct name. Saying "residence hall" gives a better description of the place in which they live.

Winter Parking, What a Hassle!

Now that the snow is upon us, one of the biggest daily problems seems to be where to find a parking spot. Well, here are a few things to remember when parking your car. Pawtucket and Standish street (the ones in front of Fox and behind Lydon library respectively) are patrolled by the Lowell Police, not the campus police, and they will tow or ticket at THEIR discretion, not the university's. They do this so that there is sufficient room to plow when it snows (like recently). If you've noticed that much of Pawtucket hasn't been plowed, that's because there are always people parked there when the plows come around.

Another reason they tow is to make room for emergency vehicles. There have been several fire alarms on both campuses since the semester began and on every occasion, the fire trucks could barely get by. Also, thanks to everyone who parks on the street, the buses can no longer make the turns around Fox and must now pick people up in the middle of the street. Not only does this hold up traffic, but it is an accident waiting to happen.

There is almost always plenty of parking in the Fox and Research Foundation lots, with bus service to all campuses. This may not be the most pleasurable way to get around campus, but it sure beats getting towed. On south campus, Lovejoy usually has a few spots left around the mounds of snow.

So, for everyone's sake, please try not to park on the streets or in other non-resident parking areas. It only makes the situation worse for everybody when you do, including yourself.

Realistic Ways of Dealing with Stress

1. Are you aware of stress?

What can be fun for someone else can be stressful for you. To solve a problem or cope with a situation, you must first be aware of what causes you stress.

2. Do you have a positive mental attitude?

The most important thing you can do is to develop an "I can do it!" attitude. Once you do you'll find that the expectation of being able to successfully handle something makes it easy to so.

3. Do you establish priorities?

When there are too many things to be done at one time, it's helpful to sit down and establish some priorities that will help you achieve your goal. For example, set a realistic schedule for yourself based on a clear sense of what you know you can achieve.

4. Plan for stress.

If you can anticipate stressful times, plan for them. Remember, you are in control of your life - no one else is. So get organized and set your schedules to help you accomplish the things that are important to you.

5. Ever ask for help?

Don't be afraid to let people know when you need their help or support. You'll be surprised at how helpful people can be. Sometimes, just talking about our problems can help you put things in perspective and help solve them.

6. Slow down.

When you feel yourself becoming tense, slow down and try to think rationally. You'll end up realizing that some of the things you find most annoying or frustrating just aren't worth getting worked up over.

7. What are your options?

Usually there's more than one way to tackle a problem. And sometimes you'll discover that no matter what you do, the problem is out of your hands. When this happens, simply tell yourself that since there's nothing you can do about it, you'll just handle it the best way you can.

8. Don't worry.

Worrying over things you can't control wastes a lot of energy and keeps you from dealing effectively with other problems.

9. Exercise.

When you are feeling tense about something, get outside your problem by exercising. Exercising is an ideal way to channel you pent-up frustration and energy. Whether it's tennis, jogging, swimming, bicycling or walking - do whatever you enjoy most. If you've been inactive for some time, it might be a good idea to check with your doctor first.

10. Allow yourself time to rest.

Not just time for sleeping but time for relaxing. Time to read. Time to write that long overdue letter to an old friend. Or time to just put your feet up and let your mind wander. Some people find that other people prefer larger blocks of time less frequently. Either way, leave some time in your schedule for you.

11. Don't just wait for tomorrow.

Don't procrastinate. Don't keep on putting things off. Do what you can today. That way, your schedule will be easier.

Campus Ministry Reflections:

"The Church and Human Sexuality"

Several months ago—in mid-October, 1993—Martin Luther made the evening news! I saw it myself. There on the TV screen was a color picture of Dr. Martin Luther, the theologian, musician, author, and church reformer of the late-15th, early-16th centuries (1483-1546). What was the occasion for this appearance of Dr. Luther? It was the release to the media of the first draft of a social statement for the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA). (The ELCA is one of the Christian denominations that uses the name "Lutheran"—showing its connections to the work of the reformer—as part of its identity.) The name of the document was "The Church and Human Sexuality: A Lutheran Perspective."

Perhaps some of you remember reading in the paper or hearing on the news reports about the statement. I have a sneaking suspicion that some of the people who reacted strongly and negatively to the sensationalized headlines hadn't actually read the 21-page draft document. It's important to keep in mind that this first draft is just that—a draft. As such, it is a working document; it's just one step in a process. It represents four years of work by a 17-member Task Force on Human Sexuality and the Christian Faith, a 50-page study guide made available to ELCA congregations in December of 1991; and 2) conducting hearings across the United States.)

The purpose of "The Church and Human Sexuality: A Lutheran Perspective" is to provide a basis for continuing study and deliberation throughout the ELCA. Congregations and members have until June 30, 1994, to respond to the statement. A second draft will then be prepared; this newer document can then be considered for official action at the 1995 Church wide Assembly. If a social statement on "The Church and Human Sexuality" is adopted at the national assembly, it—like other social statements—does not become mandatory or binding for ELCA members. Instead, its purpose is to provide insight and guidance on this particular issue.

What does the draft statement say? What are some of the questions raised that are profitable for discussion among university students?

The draft of the social statement affirms "the created goodness of sexuality," noting that "human beings are created by God as persons of dignity who are essentially relational." It acknowledges that: "Sexuality can be expressed in ways that not only bring much joy but also in ways that harm, hurt, or violate persons, relationships, and communities."

The draft calls on the members to live out their baptismal vocation as sexual beings. "As Lutherans, we offer guidelines but we also affirm our Christian freedom to make responsible decisions specific to our life situations." "Accurate, age-appropriate information about sexuality is a foundation for the nurturing of healthy persons and relationships." Open discussion is needed around "sensitive issues such as gender roles, sexual orientation, sexual functions and dysfunctions, and sexual expression by those who are mentally or physically challenged."

In a section on teenagers, the statement raises the concern of emotional and moral maturity. "We can harm ourselves and others if we become sexually active before we have come to a full awareness of who we are as persons of value and integrity....Prematurely engaging in sexual intercourse tends to short-circuit the whole process of trust-building that characterizes a mature sexual relationship." Thus, the statement affirms and encourages abstinence prior to a committed relationship. It adds, however: "If teenagers still choose to be sexually active, we encourage the responsible use of contraceptives to reduce the risk of unintended pregnancy." Condoms are encouraged in that context "to reduce the risk of contracting or spreading sexually-transmitted diseases."

The draft statement reaffirms the institution of marriage, not as an end in itself, but as a structure that serves a purpose or mission "that goes beyond either the marriage or the fulfillment of the individuals." The community participation in a public celebration of marriage "obligates the community to provide on going support for this relationship, and the couple is reminded of their responsibility to the community." At the same time, the statement acknowledges that the single life deserves positive attention and support.

The draft statement describes three common responses to the question of what it means to love our neighbor who is gay or lesbian. "Each of these responses is based on recognized interpretations of Scripture, but they differ over which texts are most relevant and how these should be understood and applied." Currently, the members of the ELCA do not exhibit agreement about their responses to homosexuality; however, the discussion is not closed and deliberations continue.

Finally, the draft statement takes a strong stand against sexual abuse (including sexual harassment), the spread of sexually-transmitted disease, and discriminatory behavior toward others due to their sexuality. It speaks out against prostitution, pornography, and the manipulation of sexuality in advertising and in the media. It commits the church to advocating for legislation and policies "that seek to prevent and heal the abuse, harm, and violation of people."

If you would like to read a copy of the draft of the social statement, please leave a message at x5014. Interested students who wish to join in the discussion are invited to attend the 1994 Winter Getaway February 18-20, 1994, at the Pilgrim Pines Conference Center in West Swanzey, NH. The theme of the retreat is, "Exploring Sexuality in the Lutheran Church," and is sponsored by the New England Region of the Lutheran Student Movement. (The registration fee is $34 before February 11, 1994.) Please leave a message at x5014 if you would like a brochure on the retreat.

Growing in Service

Students everywhere do community service. It doesn't take too much time.
 Energy is certainly needed. Your energy level will grow as will your self-confidence by doing service.
 Revitalizing a community is what service does. You can be part of helping others grow.
 Volunteering will not only help you grow as a person but potential employers focus on it as well.
 It only takes one person to create a change. One person can also influence more to volunteer. The chain of volunteerism will grow.
 Countless numbers of professional jobs grow out of volunteer opportunities. Yours could be one.
 Education is received from doing service. It is unlike any that you will acquire in school. You will grow as a person.

“Schindler’s List”—Behind good and evil

Movie Reviews Ken Provencher

Recently a friend wrote me about “Schindler’s List”: “Is the scene where the Nazis try to shoot the hingenmaker but can’t because the pistols won’t fire funny?” The question came as a slight shock, because although critics and feature writers have neglected to mention it, it’s the most inventive scene in the most inventive Nazi movie ever. Understanding the hingenmaker scene—and understanding the humor of it—is the key to the whole picture.”

Amon Goeth (Ralph Fiennes), the lead Nazi in “Schindler’s List,” feels duty-bound to execute anyone he wants, and when he goes through the trouble of dragging a Jewish hingenmaker from his workbench to put a bullet through his head, he expects results. In this case, the gun jams, he checks it, tries it again, checks it again, borrows an officer’s pistol which also jams, checks that pistol, tries it again and again only to fire clicks in the hingenmaker’s ear, and finally in frustration sends it smashing down on the man’s neck, sparing his life. Goeth’s losing his temper over a malfunctioning firearm is more horrifying than the Jew’s begging for mercy. Never mind that he’s endangering a life; Goeth just wants that damned gun to work, and his masculine pride won’t let him quit.

A lesser director than Steven Spielberg would have concentrated on the Jew’s stricken face and shot the scene for its pathos; after picking himself up off the street, the hingenmaker would have raised his arms to heaven: “Tis God that stopped the bullet!” Instead the camera closes in on the gun, letting us share the Nazi’s impatience. Our distance from the Jew gives us a chance to look at Goeth, and it’s a thrill (if not exactly a pleasure) to come face to face with a Nazi who doesn’t come off as unknowable or cartoonish. You come out of “Schindler’s List” thinking about Goeth’s feelings, and recognizing him as callous, excessive, and more than a little familiar. The hingenmaker scene is funny because Goeth can’t get what he wants, and it’s amusing to see a repulsive man thwarted by a petty technicality. It’s also funny because, after sitting through an hour of head shootings, to see a scene that’s about NOT being shot in the head feels like a reprieve. Most of what happens in “Schindler’s List” is so awful that the only way to deal with it is to laugh it off.

Whether a Jew lives or dies in “Schindler’s List” depends on the whim of the nearest Brownshirt. The excitement and suspense of the movie are in the Jews’ attempts to outwit their captors, and their varying degrees of success. Without weapons or the will to fight an impossible enemy, the anonymous survivors of Krakow come up with ingenious hiding places and on-the-spot improvisations, but their victories are never permanent. When a lone Jew is caught rummaging around in the street and convinces the Nazis that he’s under orders to clean it, his success seems totally arbitrary. He’s free for the moment, but, statistically speaking, we know he’ll be killed tomorrow, if not today. There are dozens of scenes like this, where magnificent Jewish actors (and non-actors) use all their cunning to keep the guns in their holsters; some are spared, some are not. The quickness of these Jews and the quickness of the Nazis’ reactions are endlessly entertaining. (The movie runs a brisk three hours and fifteen minutes.)

Spielberg pulls us out of the action only twice: once with a flourish, and once with a speech. The flourish works much better. In the middle of an extended sequence in Krakow, where the Nazis boot-ed out every Jew during a noon-to-midnight raid, a girl in a thick red coat weaves her way safely through an incredibly staged series of executions, only to vanish from the screen moments later. Her smallness catches the eye of Oskar Schindler (Liam Neeson), who is watching the raid from a nearby hilltop. The girl’s importance to Schindler isn’t obvious at first (although her presence is obvious, as her red coat clashes with the black-and-white photography), but when he spots her again days later, his desire to rescue over a thousand Jews needs no further explanation. The girl in red stands for the Jew whose survival is given all the benefits of youth and movement and luck, but no guarantee. (That’s her hand being held in the advertisements.) Schindler, a Catholic businessman who wanted nothing more than to out-profit his father, becomes a subtle revolutionary. He doesn’t say outright, “Those bastards...They can’t get away with it...I’ll do whatever it takes...” The girl and his thoughts about her are left for the audience to interpret, and they come and go as quickly as the rest of the movie. “Schindler’s List” isn’t the dirge it could have been; it’s a swiftly accumulating number of details that, in the end, give us a portrait of an abomination much more authentic than the newsreel footage of bulldozed bodies and skeleton pits.

I wish the last fifteen minutes of “Schindler’s List” didn’t happen, so it’s best to get them out of the way. What was Spielberg thinking? Schindler breaks down in despair over the many more he might have saved. And the Jews—all eleven hundred of them—gather around to comfort him. All this excruciating violence and persecution, and we’re supposed to care about Schindler’s pain? Liam Neeson has a terrific voice, and I would have been moved had the moment been a private one. Instead I felt embarrassed for Schindler and ashamed for the crying woman in front of me; until the last scene, both of them had kept their heads.

The movie closes with a few real-life survivors placing a stone on Schindler’s grave, escorted by the actors who played them. I know it’s supposed to be a solemn curtain call, but do we really need to see the Schindler Jews as they are now: old, wrinkled, strapped in wheelchairs? The black-and-white ending—a long line of survivors descending a hill towards freedom—was perfect. The Jews were alive and free forever. This modern-day ending puts a vulture on your shoulder. The first three hours of “Schindler’s List” are a visual representation of Hannah Arendt’s banality of Evil; the last fifteen minutes are a tacky home movie about the banality of Good.

The National Theatre of the Deaf in "Under Milk Wood"

The University of Massachusetts Lowell Center for the Arts presents The National Theatre of the Deaf in Dylan Thomas' Under Milk Wood on Sunday, February 13, at 8:00 PM.

Under Milk Wood is Dylan Thomas' loving and exuberant chronicle of life in a small Welsh fishing village. Beginning before dawn with dreams and ghosts, the tale moves through the vibrant, noisy day of the eccentric townspeople, closing as "the rain of dusk brings on the bawdy night." Full of poetic fireworks and music-hall humor, the play has been praised as one of the most impassioned, lyrical-and hilarious accounts of what it is to be alive.

Revered for his roll-off-the-tongue poetry, Dylan Thomas wrote Under Milk Wood as a commissioned piece for London's BBC Radio. Ten years in the making, the play was completed in 1953 just two weeks before Thomas' death at the age of 39.

The National Theatre of the Deaf first produced Under Milk Wood in 1970, creating an earthy, comic adaptation which went to Broadway and became known as the company's signature piece. For the 1993-94 season, David Hays, the founding Artistic Director of the NTD, decided to take the opportunity to celebrate the play again on its fortieth anniversary with a national tour of the production.

The NTD gave its first performance in 1967-with six people in the audience, most of them buying tickets out of curiosity. Twenty-six years and one Tony Award later, the NTD has brought audiences to their feet on six continents, received rave reviews from New York to New Delhi and has been the subject of countless print and electronic media profiles.

With a combination of American Sign Language and the spoken work, the February 13 performance of Under Milk Wood is designed for all audiences, hearing and deaf.

The performance will take place at Durgin Hall on the University's south campus at the corner of Pawtucket and Wilder Streets. Free, lighted parking is nearby.

Tickets are priced at $19/17/15, or $17/15/13 if purchased by February 4 with an Early Bird Discount. Student tickets are $9.50/8.50/7.50 (1/2 price). Tickets can be ordered with MasterCard/Visa by calling 508/934-4444 weekdays between 10 AM and 4 PM.

Don't Miss your Chance (ellor)

In a statement released several weeks ago, Chancellor Hogan discussed some of the changing expectations, needs, and goals of colleges nationwide. He explained that some universities such as MIT and Tulane have already developed comprehensive plans to meet these expectations, needs and goals.

In an attempt to develop a comparable plan for UMass Lowell, Chancellor Hogan has "opened his doors" to the UML community with the hopes of improving the flow of information, ideas, and concerns.

Chancellor Hogan should be applauded for his efforts to remain in touch with students and faculty. More importantly, all of us should take advantage of this opportunity to have a say in the agenda of the administration in the future.

This is the equivalent of President Clinton holding open office hours for any and all citizens to let him know where they stand on the health care issue. It's like the Pope asking what you think about the direction in which the Catholic Church should be headed. It's like Dan Marino swinging by Paul Taglibue office to give his input on a new collective bargaining agreement.

Give your opinion on the direction you feel the university should take. Tell Chnaccellor Hogan what you think about Library funding, the proposed arena, or majors that might face elimination. ## MASSPIRG Activities Hunger/Homelessness Project

MASSPIRG's Hunger and Homelessness Project

MASSPIRG will be working on a project to solve hunger and homelessness this semester. The problems associated with hunger and homelessness are very evident in a city such as Lowell. These problems exist well beyond this city and the state, so MASSPIRG has decided to work on this problem.

The project will involve several different items over the course of the semester. The biggest one will be the Tenth annual Hunger Cleanup. This is a nationwide work-a-thon sponsored by the National Student Campaign Against Hunger and Homelessness. On April 16, 1994 over 300 colleges and universities will participate in this event. During that day, volunteers will work to clean up and fix up local shelters and soup kitchens. They will also fundraiser throughout the semester to raise money that will go to hunger relief efforts here in Lowell, nationally and internationally.

The other big thing this project will address is a legislative issue. In conjunction with the Home for All Coalition, MASSPIRG will be working to gain sponsors to a bill in the Massachusetts Legislature that will work to provide more housing and hopefully a "home for all" in Massachusetts. If you are interested in this project call Todd at 454-6593 or come to a project meeting Tuesdays at 3:00, 339 McGauvran SUB.

Problems with Plagiarism

One of the greatest temptations that a student will confront during his/her academic career is plagiarism. Initially, plagiarism may appear to be a means to achieving one's perceived goal - grades that will enable the student to graduate in good standing. However, good grades are not the sole indicator of academic success. Grades are merely a measurement used in academic settings to assess a student's performance. However, they are not necessarily a testament that the student has participated fully in the learning process. Education is not about grades. It is, rather, a process by which the student obtains knowledge. While undetected plagiarism may "reward" the student with a favorable grade, it does not offer the true reward of an education - knowledge. Through plagiarism, the student cheats him/herself of the learning process.

The consequences of plagiarism are severe. They range from lack of knowledge to academic dismissal. Some students may justify plagiarism on the basis that the knowledge to be gained by an assignment is irrelevant to their long term educational and career goals. However, it should be noted that any assignment or opportunity to learn can only be to the student's benefit. Furthermore, students should keep in mind that the consequences of their actions could end both their educational and career goals. Additionally, students should consider the destructive impact that the act of plagiarism has on the student-teacher relationship.

Plagiarism breaks the trust between the teacher and the student. The attempt to receive credit for someone else's work is an act of deception. A teacher may be inclined to discredit past and future works of the student even if those works are legitimate. Just one act of plagiarism could irreparably tarnish a student's reputation in the eyes of that teacher. Students must ask themselves whether plagiarizing is worth the risk of losing a teacher's trust and respect.

Plagiarism demonstrates lack of respect for the teacher. It is insulting to a teacher's professional experience when a student attempts to pass off someone else's work as their own. Teachers are generally well experienced in recognizing the capabilities and writing styles of individual students. Plagiarism inhibits the learning process by denying the teacher of evidence that the student has learned by his/her teachings. Furthermore, a student who plagiarizes invalidates the worthiness of the knowledge that the teacher is trying to pass on to the student through the assignment.

Students need to understand that teachers and the knowledge they pass on are and, historically, have been the primary tools for expanding the intellectual ability of people. Ultimately, the student who plagiarizes loses his/her position of being a benefactor of the teacher's knowledge. A plagiarized work, submitted to a teacher for commentary and evaluation, does not provide the student with feedback on what he/she has learned. Education is a process of learning through which knowledge is obtained. Obtaining knowledge is dependent upon participation in the learning process. Education must be looked upon as a goal in and of itself rather than merely a means to a goal.

Advice on Making Fake IDs

Two months ago I read an article about 4 guys who got caught for making false drivers licenses in New Jersey. I am writing this article in hopes that it may sway anyone away from manufacturing and selling false drivers licenses. I will attempt to do this by relating a personal experience, talking about a common myth about how not to get caught, and explaining why law officials are concentrating their efforts on stopping this crime.

(1) Approximately 2 years ago, I thought about making fake drivers licenses to earn money. I had heard many stories of great fortunes being made, and so I gave it a shot. It took me a few months to get the equipment and to produce good IDs. Well, time went on, ...and within another six months I had made approximately $5,000. Many other students were doing the same. Right now your probably saying "hey, sounds great but I thought you were supposed to convince us not to want to make fake IDs? Well, here comes the bad part.

One morning I woke up, bought the newspaper, and found my name plastered on the cover. I was indicted for making fake drivers licenses. It seems that two of the people for whom I had made IDs for got caught and were forced into explaining where they had obtained the licenses. To top off my day, I had received a letter from school stating that I was expelled from the university.

After explaining to my father what had happened, my father and I went to see Dean Leo F. King to see why I had been expelled. It appears that schools have the right to expel anyone if they consider their actions bad for the school's name and threatening to students safety. I explained to the Dean that I personally did not make any IDs for any student at this school and asked to be allowed to continue with classes. He agreed, and I continued taking classes but was placed on probation. When I first met Dean King that day, I thought he was going to tell me to get lost. Instead, he listened to what I had to say and was very understanding.

At this tie I would like to thank Dean King and Dean Taylor for believing in me and helping me out through a hard time. If it weren't for their help, things would have turned out much worse and I would probably not be graduating at UMASS Lowell this semester. Thank You.

Well, I hired a lawyer and went to court on the set date. Five other boys who had committed the same crime were also present. The ordeal went on for approximately seven months and by the time it was all over, I had taken a plea bargain to pay a $1500 fine, perform 160 hours of community service, pay my lawyer $8500, and be on probation for 2 years. I got off easy compared to another boy who was sent to jail for the

Non-Smokers' Dilemma

Hello! My name is Sy and I'm a senior in the Exercise Physiology program. I've always disliked eating in the South Campus Cafeteria because they allow smoking in there. It's not very pleasant eating and breathing in second-hand smoke that irritates my throat and stinks up my clothes. Second-hand or side-stream smoke is the smoke from the burning end of a cigarette, pipe or cigar.

On 7 Jan 93, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) released a report concerning the effects of second-hand tobacco smoke. It concluded that second-hand smoke has a "serious and substantial public health impact" on nonsmokers.

The EPA also found that passive smoking led to:

1. 3,000 lung cancer deaths a year in nonsmokers (I know I wouldn't want myself or anyone that was close to me to be one of the 3,000 per year that died of lung cancer because they were forced to breathe someone else's smoke).

2. An increased frequency of asthma attacks in 200,000 to one million asthmatic children, as well as a higher risk of getting asthma.

3. A build up of fluid in the inner ear, which could lead to an ear infection.

The report also categorized tobacco smoke as a Class A toxin. Other Class A carcinogenic substances include benzene and radon.

some chemicals in tobacco are carcinogenic (they cause cancer) while others irritate the respiratory system, causing smoker's cough and other symptoms. Carbon monoxide (a poisonous, odorless gas that also come out of the exhaust pipe of automobiles) in cigarette smoke displaces oxygen in red blood cells which decreases Research has demonstrated that in rooms where people are smoking, the body's supply of oxygen. levels of carbon monoxide can be greater than those allowed by the Federal Air Quality Standards for outside air. The nasty thing about carbon monoxide is that it is still present in the bloodstream five hours after you breathed it in. Nicotine is a powerful drug in tobacco that can elevate blood pressure, increase heart rate, and constrict blood vessels. It forces the heart to pump more blood which can strain the heart if the coronary arteries are already damaged.

According to "Core Concepts in Health", "there are probably no safe levels of tobacco smoke inhalation". If you are in a building where people smoke, you ARE affected adversely. The University of Nebraska at Lincoln is considering banning smoking in all buildings except residence halls. Herbert Howe, Jr, associate to the chancellor at Nebraska says, "All our building have closed air circulation. It's impossible to find a place where people smoke and not have the smoke end up in the rest of the building."

I wonder how many smokers know that second-hand smoke bothers and harms others. Either they don't know or they don't care.

Nonsmokers are now beginning to speak up for their right to breathe clean air, free from damaging and irritating tobacco smoke. According to the "Nonsmoker's Bill of Rights" (from Core Concepts in Health, 91, Insel) this right supersedes the right to smoke when the two conflict. I don't care if people smoke, but I DO care if I'm forced to breathe their smoke. I propose that smoking be banned from the South Campus Cafeteria. (Why there? I have to start somewhere.) If people want to smoke, they can do it outside where the second-hand smoke doesn't damage MY lungs. According to the Coalition of Smoking or Health, 92% of all smokers say they would like to quit. If smokers had to smoke outside of the cafeteria, they may smoke less or at least be aware that smoking is a serious issue. This would be a step towards quitting.

In my campaign to eliminate smoking in the South Campus Cafeteria I've encountered some people who were very enthusiastic about signing the petition. Here are some of their opinions:

1. P.T. Professor: "My opinion is that this is a healthy policy to adopt. Personally, the reason I don't eat in the cafeteria is because of the smoke. There is no reason why we should be subject to the well documented ill-effect of 2nd-hand smoke while eating and socializing in the cafeteria."

2. Nursing Instructor: "Smoking is a health threat, not only to the smoker, but to innocent bystanders. It costs our country millions of health care dollars."

3. EP (Exercise Physiology) Student: "In the light of recent evidence on second hand smoke—It's my opinion that NO ONE should be forced to inhale someone else's smoke. I would like to protect myself and others by banning smoking in the UMass Cafeterias."

4. Student: "3 people from Massachusetts die every DAY of 2nd hand smoke! That's all I have to say."

5. Student: "I feel that the cafeteria should ban smoking because it is not only hazardous to the second hand smoker, but it is disgusting to inhale smoke while eating! Please try to do something about this. It is not our choice to eat with smokers—we are forced! I'm a voice major—that's all I have to say!"

6. Music Student: "Smoking should never occur in an eating environment and even though we may not directly see it or smell it, it still affects people. In accordance with the state-run campaign to "Make Smoking History", this state University should begin to effect these changes for the health of all its student body. Certainly a student can smoke in other places and cease for 20-30 minutes while preserving the rights of other students to eat their food in a cleaner environment. Indeed the food personnel would work less hard."

7. Sy: "I was talking to a cafeteria worker and s/he said that s/he had allergies and was bothered by the smoke but didn't want to sign the petition and take away another's right to smoke in the cafeteria. My heart goes out to all the other people in the cafeteria who have asthma or allergies and whose condition is aggravated by the University's current dining environment. Some nonsmokers refuse to eat in the cafeteria because of the smoke and lose out on social time and sometimes a hot meal."

8. EP Student: "I have nothing against smokers, I just think it is rude near where people are eating."

9. EP Student: "Again research proves that exposure to second-hand smoke contributes to the risk of cancer & health problems. It should be banned."

I have something to say to the people that smoke in the cafeteria, which is the same thing I say to my brother when he blasts his heavy metal music while I'm studying or trying to read, 'Keep it to YOURSELF!' It's one thing to smoke by yourself but it's another to smoke and let it affect unwilling victims.

If you are concerned about breathing in second-hand smoke inside University buildings, I urge you to write or call Chancellor Hogan. Let your voice be heard.

Get Involved With Fear No People Week

March 28 - April 1

Explore, Experience, and Embrace a World of Difference

UMass Lowell

Fear No People Week is a week dedicated to celebrating Multiculturalism here at UMass Lowell. There are already several pieces of the week in place:

- Martin Luther King III will speak at Cumnock Hall on March 28th at 7pm following a Candlelight March

- Multicultural Jeopardy will occur on both North and South Campus

- Culture Fest is scheduled for March 31st in Cumnock Hall

- A new quilt titled Peace by Piece celebrating the different facets of UMass Lowell will be created and displayed

But we want you or your club to get involved as well. "How?" you ask. Here are just a few ways:

- Help with any of the events or activities listed above

- Coordinate an event or speaker for the week. If you give us the information we will add you to our publicity. This is a great way for your club to be seen on campus.

Anything submitted by Feb. 16th will go on the main event poster.

- Tell a friend what is scheduled to happen and ask them to help spread the word

- Ask your professor if it is okay for you to make an announcement in class and then tell them what is happening and how easy it is to get involved.

Any questions or if you want to get involved call the Student Activities Office (x5001) and ask for any Fear No People Week Committee Member

UML Hoop Domination!

Both the Men's & Women's Teams Defeat Keen State

by Christopher Meelia
Sports Editor

Wednesday night at Costello Gym the UMass Lowell men's basketball team posted back-to-back victories for the first time this season.

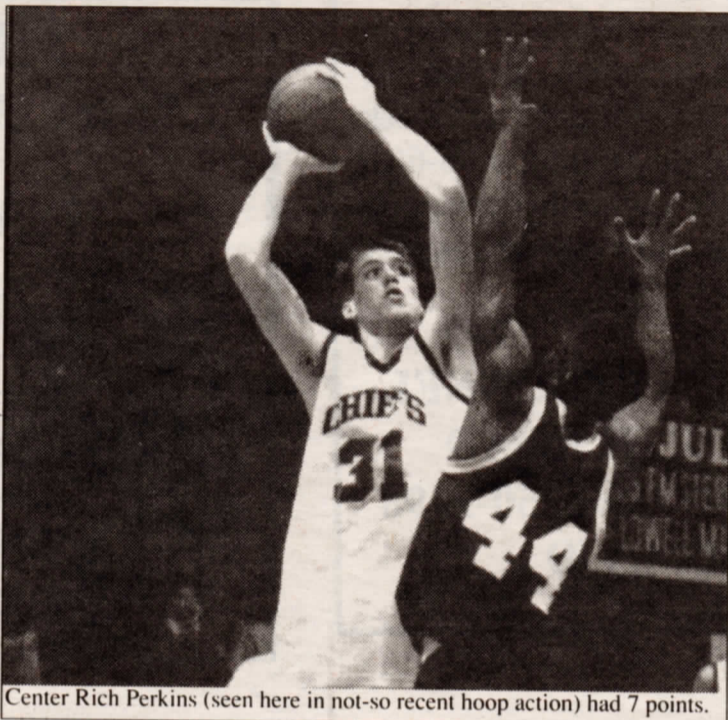

The Chiefs (6-13, 3-6 NECC) played played Keene State, who wasn't the most challenging opponent in the league (2-17, 1-8), but was an obstacle the Chiefs had to play well against in order to take home the victory. They did just that.

"It wasn't pretty," admitted UML coach Gary Manchell, "but they made a run at us in the second half and we opened it back up to 20. That shows something. And a win is a win."

Center Jeichael Henderson (22 points on 8-for-11 shooting) led the way for the chiefs and lowell native Jim Borodawka (15 points, five assists) provided a nice spark off the bench.

Guard Spencer Staggs had a quiet night from the floor with nine points but kept Chiefs gears churning with six assists, six rebounds and six steals.

Whenever the score got just close enough to make you squirm in your seat - in Center Rich Perkins (seen here in not-so recent hoop action) had 7 points.

came Staggs to make the steal or pull down the rebound that sparked the Chiefs.

"We've got so many guys capable of scoring, we don't need a go-to guy," said Staggs, the team's top three-point shooter. "We want to play as a team."

Forward Brent Oakleaf had a solid game (10 points, eight rebounds), as did center Rich Perkins, who scored seven points coming off the bench.

The Lady Chiefs made quick work of their Keene State opponent by way of a convincing 92-61 win.

Senior Darlene Orlando-Ciarcia scored 21 points and grabbed six rebounds to lead the way for the NECC's top team (14-5, 7-2 NECC).

The chiefs had little trouble with their outmatched foe, but the contest was hardly a rout. The first half saw an uncommonly lethargic chiefs team that had few highlights.

The second half, however was more typical of what the lady chiefs are known for.

Kris Gorski was on fire scoring 10 of her game high 18 points in the second half on 7-for-7 shooting including two treys.

Orlando-Ciarcia's six rebounds made her the all-time leading rebounder for the chiefs with a total of 916 record

Captain Darlene Orlando-Ciarcia grabbed her UML record 916th rebound against Keene State, along with 21 points.

A Closer Look...

by Christopher Meelia
Sports Editor

Have you picked up the sports page lately? Have you had a chance to peruse through your favorite sports magazine? We are in the midst of a fantastic period in sports history. So much is changing around us, some for better, and others for worse. As we usher out the heroes and events of yesterday and anxiously await the emergence of future superstars, It is important that we keep a proper perspective. With that in mind lets take a closer look at a couple of the athletes that are shaping the future of sports.

• Tanya Harding

I do not care much for skating. After all the dust settles from the Harding/Kerrigan incident (if it ever does) my opinions will probably be the same. I do not dislike it, I just don't follow it. As far as the whole "Incident" is concerned, I really don't care. It would be one thing if Kerrigan was severely hurt, but she is fine now. I hope I don't sound insensitive - at the time of the incident I felt sincere sympathy for Nancy. But that was three weeks ago! Why am I constantly reminded of the "Incident" every day? My sister Kerri is a fantastic swimmer and diver, yet as her brother I do not feel obligated to know when and where she holds her practices. So why would I care that Kerrigan works out in Dennis, Ma on the Cape. So what if Harding works out at a skating rink in a Portland, Or. mall. Tanya Harding is a creep. I feel like I know Jeff Gilooly like a brother now, and I'm convinced that he is a loser. Can we crown them "Jerks of the Month" and get 'em off of my TV screen please.

• Michael Jordan

Bird is gone; as are Magic, Nolan Ryan, and Walter Payton. Howie Long just retired a week ago and Barkley and Montana are hanging on by a thread. This Jordan guy though, we cant seem to get rid of him. Just when we thought we could close the Jordan scrap book and start a new one for the "Shaq" or Drew Bledsoe - along comes Jordan, poking his nose into our national pastime. Public sentiment has consisted mostly of ignorance mixed with mockery. Nobody seems to care. Those who even notice simply make fun of him. "He just wants to make more money," is the more common explanation for his recent efforts to make the Chicago White Sox. "He'll never make it," is the majority view on the issue. I cant help but think that maybe we are brushing this guy aside too soon. He was undoubtedly the greatest player in the history of the NBA. What if he actually makes it in baseball. Not like the injury prone strike out machine named Bo Jackson or the trash-talking mouth of the south "Neon" Deion Sanders either. What if Jordan, in his competitive but classy mannor, happens to be a great baseball player too? Maybe he'll never hit a curveball, and maybe he won't even make the team. But if he does I'll see you on the bandwagon. I'm getting my seat early.

With about eight minutes remaining in the first period, sophomore winger Christian Sbrocca put the puck into the net for his ninth goal of the season.

At 17:42 of the first period, senior Shane Henry netted his first of the night with an assist from fellow tri-captain Mike Murray. Stand-out goalie Dwayne Roloson kicked out all ten shots he saw in the opening framed and the Chiefs skated off the ice with a 2-0 lead amidst a standing ovation from the near capacity crowd.

UMass Lowell wasted no time in the second period when defenseman Kerry Angus blasted a shot past McKersie for the Chiefs second powerplay goal of the night and a 3-0 lead with less than thirty seconds gone in the second. This time however the Terriers bounced back finally getting a shot past Roloson at the 8:51 mark as Mike Pomichter knock a bouncing puck into the net.

The Chiefs extended the lead back to three when Henry in put his second goal on a feed from freshman sensation Greg Bullock. The goal, the Chiefs third power play goal of the game and fortieth of the season, came at about the midpoint of the game.

BU struck one more time. With only seventeen seconds remaining in the second, freshman Shane Johnson scored his first of the season to cut the lead to two.

In the third period the goalies to over. A stingy UMass Lowell defense and Roloson combined to shut down the potent BU attack. The fought of a late BU power play and held on to win the game, on the biggest in since the school's move to Division One and Hockey East.

As usual Roloson was a big part of the victory stopping 25 of 27 shots while the Chiefs offense blasted BU with 34 shots of their own. The penalty killing/power play of the Chiefs once again came to the front as UMass Lowell scored one three of seven power plays and kill six of seven against a BU power play which led the nation.

Th victory moves the Chiefs to 15-5-5 overall and 9-3-4 in Hockey East where the Chiefs sit just two points behind the Terriers pending the outcome of Friday night's rematch.

UML Marching Band

The Awards Banquet for the Marching Band took place Jan. 29, 1994. Congratulations to all award recipients! The night began with comments on the season past, a season not easily forgotten. Dan spoke of the progression that the season took (not quite a straight line, but generally upward!!), the fact the performance itself was as long as two and a half high-school shows, and concluded by saying he was extremely pleased with the end result - one of the best performances in the school's history. Awards: plaques were presented to Jim Felker, Karen Consalvi and Christy Breault in thanks for their service this year as (respectively) Field Conductor, Assistant Field conductor and Colorguard Captain. The uniform managers, Brian Fulks and Heather Erickson, equipment manager Jim Morris and assistant Scott Jordan, along with Librarian Karen Consalvi and field manager Jamie Bigelow were thanked for their work as well. A note of thanks was also directed to the members of the Board of Representatives.

The superlative awards were as follows: Eric Linsner received Best Marcher, Carl Lindberg received Best Musician, and Natalie Balch received "Rookie of the Year". although there were no new inductees into the Hall of Fame, Special recognition went to Hall of Fame inductee (1992), Shah Salmi for his musical leadership on trumpet, vocals, and snare. He received an award for Most Valuable Performer. Jamie Bigelow received an award for Most Valuable Person, someone who is consistently prepared musically and otherwise, who is responsible and always ready to help., and who sets the tone of leadership through example.

After much anticipation, next season's roster was announced. Jim Felker will be returning as Field Conductor, Heather Erickson will fill the Assistant Field Conductor position, and Kristy Flickinger will be stepping in as Colorguard Captain.

Finally, a personal note: This year we lose a number of wonderful people who have brought to the band their talent, their drive and strong commitment to perfection: Karen, Renee, April, Scott, Lisa, Jamie, Lynn, Shah, Chris, MaryAnne, and Nikki. This spans all sections, many majors and a lifetime of memories. congratulations on your graduation. You will be missed.

MARINES

Pride.
A good woman wears it well.
Pride, it's reflected in her eyes and face, in the way she wears ing you get when you become a United States Marine. Earning the title Marine means you have what it takes to get to the top, you're a cut above the rest.

Being a Marine means belonging to an elite group of men and women who have demonstrated that they have what it takes to be one of the few. If you'd like to find out if you have what it
